REVENUE DEPARTMENT.

No. 12934—12941, Circular dated 14—17*th May* 1912.

Cases of unauthorized use of Government water are steadily on the increase, the reason, perhaps, being the inadequacy of the punishment awarded. It is not that a deterrent punishment is always called for, but, when the circumstances of a case indicate the necessity for it, it should not be withheld. Generally, the water of a tank should remain for its prescribed atchkat, and when we consider that, with every rain, a good deal of silt is washed which goes to lessen the capacity of the tank and thereby the quantity of water available for the atchkat, it would be unpardonable on anybody's part to add to the atchkat. It is not only incumbent upon the Local Revenue officers to see that no Government water is used surreptitiously or in anticipation of sanction, but to steadily discourage applications for neersardi. As a rule, no permanent neersardi should be granted, for it is practically increasing the atchkat. There would, however, be no valid objection to grant a temporary neersardi and that for one year only in years of plentiful rainfall, when the water in the tank is likely to be in excess of the requirements of its atchkat. The atchkat should not be added to permanently except after mature consideration and for very good reason. The Sub-Division Officers should not, as a rule, write to the Revenue Survey Department recommending permanent neersardi. That action should always remain to the Deputy Commissioner. It is requested that necessary instructions be issued in this matter to the subordinate Revenue officers.
